E. Lee Rosenthal, PhD, MS, MPH has served in a leadership role in numerous groundbreaking policy projects in the CHW field, including the National Community Health Advisor Study, the CHW Evaluation Toolkit Project, the CHW National Education Collaborative. She recently led a retrospective evaluation of the Community HealthCorps Program for the National Association of Community Health Centers, examining the role of CHWs and other “Members” serving health centers across the US. In each project she has insured CHWs’ leadership and active participation in research and policy development. Lee has played a long-term role in the development of the APHA unit which became the CHW Section in 2009; she continues to serve as an active Section Special Advisor. Lee serves on various national and regional advisory groups aimed at improving health equity and integration of CHWs in the US public health workforce.
