AT THE UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS SCHOOL OF PUBLIC HEALTH

Faculty Associate Tom Reynolds earned his master's degree in health care administration from Trinity University in San Antonio and his doctorate in management and policy from The University of Texas School of Public Health. His primary research interests center on issues related to health service access. His experience includes applying geographical information systems technologies and small area estimation methods to these issues, which led to his involvement in developing several Web-based local and regional health data query and dissemination systems. A major objective of his current work with the institute is to help develop such a system for the data gathered for the Health of Houston survey.
