

UTHealth Innovation in Cancer Prevention Research Training Program

Funded by Cancer Prevention and Research Institute of Texas (CPRIT)

ATTENTION

DOCTORAL STUDENTS

Are you interested in learning the tools of INNOVATIVE THINKING?

Are you planning a CANCER-RELATED dissertation?

We are seeking students at UTHealth from the School of Public Health, School of Biomedical Informatics, Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences, and Medical School (MD/MPH) for our unique training program.

Pre-Doctoral fellows (who may be on international visas) receive:

- Training and coaching in innovative thinking by the author of four books on innovation, UTHealth's Vice-President for Innovation, Dr. Roberta Ness
- Excellent mentoring in a rich research environment with the stimulation of a complementary mentor
- Health Insurance and tuition/fees (up to $6,000 based on in-state status that comes with the fellowship) for doctoral studies and approved short courses. Also, books, software, $1000 travel to national meetings, cubicle space, and a laptop computer
- Writing consultation
- Ongoing support and feedback in an integrative research seminar led by the Program directors; sessions focus on application of innovative thinking to work in progress, dissertation and grant applications, ethics cases, and provocative journal articles, and career development writing and presentation skills
- Coursework and on-line training in the responsible conduct of research
- $28,000 for full-time effort toward a rigorous academic program

Pre-Doctoral Affiliate fellows with salary support from employment or other fellowships related to cancer research receive: All benefits listed above for pre-doctoral fellows—training and coaching, mentoring, tuition/fees, books/software, travel, computer, writing consultation, and ongoing support and feedback in the integrative seminar – except salary support and health insurance.

Applications will be accepted through
September 30th 2016 (11:59pm CDT).
