Understanding Texas Law on Sexual Health Education

Originally passed in 1995, the Texas Education Code (TEC) is the state law that governs Texas public education. TEC §28.004 outlines the requirements for sexual health education instruction (called Human Sexuality Instruction specifically in the code); indicates the need for every school district to have a School Health Advisory Council (SHAC) that reviews sexual education instruction; and describes the process for curriculum adoption, parent notification, and parent consent. Significant changes were made to §28.004 in the 87th Legislative session (2021). It is important to remember that some school districts set their own policy which may be slightly different or more restrictive than the state’s minimum requirements for sexual health education instruction. Therefore, it is important to review your own district’s policy as well.

Sometimes it can be challenging to interpret the Texas Education Code, its changes, and how that impacts your instruction. The following tables include sections of the Texas Education Code that are most relevant to implementing a sexual health education program in your school and how your curriculum instruction is affected. The full Texas Education Code §28.004 is at the end of the document.

As you are reading the Texas Education Code, keep in mind that the same laws for curriculum approval and availability, and parent opt-in and notification, apply to instruction on the prevention of child abuse, family violence, dating violence, and sex trafficking.
